LO! HERE THE GENTLE LARK - - - Sir Henry Bishop.

Lo! Here the gentle lark weary of rest,
From his moist cabinet mounts upon high
And wakes the morning from whose silver breast
The sun ariseth in true majesty.
Lo! Here the gentle lark, etc., etc.—Shakspere.

DANSE MACABRE - - - - Saint Saens.

Tic-a-tac, tic-a tac, Grim Death.
With rhythmic heel, beats time upon the tomb,
At midnight, Death plays a tune for dancing—
Tic-a-tac, tic-a-tac—upon his violin.
Now blow the wintry blasts, the night is dark,
The sighs of woe float through the linden grove,
And skeletons white flit through the shadowy gloom,
Dancing and capering in their white shrouds.
Tic-a-tac, tic, right gaily dance the spectres,
The clattering of their bones is plainly heard.

* * * * *

But psitt! all at once the dancing ceases,
They run, they fly—for the cock has crowed.
